EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING

Experiential Learning for Real-World Impact

Experiential learning is the cornerstone of the CEIBS MBA Learning Model. At the heart of our approach are the CEIBS Real Situation Learning Method and the Case Method, where students, faculty, and business practitioners engage in a dynamic, interactive process. Students are immersed in real-world management challenges faced by Chinese and global companies, analysing complex scenarios and making strategic recommendations, often with limited information. This approach deepens your understanding of Chinese business practices and enhances your grasp of global business dynamics in the rapidly growing Asian region.

Integration Applications

A key element of our experiential learning approach is the Integration Applications series, which offers interdisciplinary, practice-focused learning experiences. These courses utilise various teaching methodologies, including simulated business exercises, technology-enabled simulations, and real-world consulting projects with leading companies in China (Integrated Consulting Project). Working in teams under the guidance of our faculty, students draw on their diverse business knowledge to develop innovative solutions to complex business challenges. This approach enhances their analytical abilities, strategic and creative thinking, and communication skills—essential for success in today’s business environment.
